To the DAILY GAZETTEER.

S I R,

BEING at my Country Lodgings, a Friend of mine, who had formerly been a Student of Christ Church, but by reading Harrington, Sidney and Locke, which with much Difficulty I brought him to, was become a staunch Whig, came in upon me, when I had a Craftsman, and a Common-Sense-Man, lying on my Table, as if I intended to write you a Letter; but my Friend snatching up Papers, twisted them together and flung them to the Window, saying, *These two, or these many more, I know not nor care not what they are, are so intolerably dull, that one should get as much wit by a Critick on a Quack Bill, or a Haymarket Sermon, as upon Squire Danvers's or Mr. Common-Sense's Papers: I know Authors always say by one other, They are horribly dull, when they fall out; 'tis every Spirit and Substance of Caleb's Criticisms: But, says, the Authors are as much in the Wrong, as they in flattering one another when they fall in. Being no party concern'd, I am really in earnest when I tell you, never read such a Parcel of paltry, pitiful Stuff—as has been in those two Papers for some Weeks past. Ah, said I, I have promised my Friend, the Gazetteer, a Letter or two, and I must be as good as my Word. Man's Head has a heavy Burthen to carry such Papers in it for a Day or two; but the Waggon that carries a Stage, must take the heavier with the lighter. My Friend reply'd, As for your Letter or two, I have more Leisure than you, and I will send you two Letters which I have been hammering these two or three Weeks, Verse will go down with you. He perceiv'd I took well, and accordingly he sent me the inclosed little to Mr. Common Sense, and some Hudibrasicks relating to Squire Danvers. They are intitled, Web and the Conjurer; A Tale: and I will send it to you in my next.*

An Epistle to Mr. COMMON SENSE.

SIR, if your Dignity and grand Affairs Permit you to descend to smaller Cares, such as, I pray, a gracious Ear to lend to one, who is to Common Sense, a Friend and wishes, no Offence he hopes, that you should learn, if not too late, to be so too.

First, 'twill be necessary you should quit, vain Ambition to be thought a Wit. If you must be so, or right or wrong, let it, where Sense is needless, in a Song; such as have lately so enrich'd the Stage; and do not in grave Politicks engage your Reason's wanted there, and that as soon as Monkey will inform as a Buffoon. Wit's not Reason, it at least should be like it, that they ne'er should disagree. Think not you hit it, when a Random Stroke pointed Malice passes for a Joke; when Falshood, wearing Truth's dishonour'd Face the Counterfeit discovers by Grimace; or Truth is ever seen without Disguise, and Scandal laughs the most, when most She lies. Hard Shifts of Faction, that betray the Fraud which wise Men pity, and the Weak applaud. When, as in base Coin, the Silver wears, and on the Munk Front the Brass appears, the Weak become as knowing as the Wise, and if the Cheat will then be safe, he flies.

Your Faction, like the Mountebank begins, he boasts his Nostrums, and his Andrew grins; the Mob, well pleas'd, with gaping Mouths look on, and soon the Little that they had is gone: their Pence you seek not, but you rob their Mind, and leave them poorer there than e'en you find.

Next 'twill be fit, you some degree of Shame should have, not sport with a forbidden Name. Want of Decency, is want of Sense, Judge how your Works will warrant your Pretence.

Weigh well the Talents needful to the Great, And ask yourself, if yours can mend the State? That Question honestly discuss'd you'll own, If he you injure has them, you have none.

If Wisdom, Vigilance, Experience, Zeal, Are Requisites to serve the Commonweal; If Steadiness, and Solid Sense, are Things That render Countels safe to States, or Kings; If Honour, Oeconomy, Courage, Care, Are Qualities that bid for Greatness fair, Of these have you a more than common Share? In high Perfection do not these belong, Confess it, tho' you blush, to Him you wrong? Next to the Innocent is he who owns Th' Offence for which a due Remorse atones. No more of this — till you are more prepar'd To hear such Truths, and what you hear, regard. Your Head now giddy with false Hopes of Fame, While Homage you expect, you'll spurn at Shame, And still pretend in Counsel Seats to sit By Virtue of your Common Sense and Wit. Your Wit and Common Sense together, scarce Wou'd furnish F—g for a Smithfield Farce: No arbitrary Censure this, the Proof Is staring; ev'ry Paper has enough. But should we the Particulars rehearse, Too heavy would the Burthen be for Verse.

When many Crimes in one Indictment stand, And Evidence substantial is at Hand, Culprit abash'd, despairing of Defence Plead Guilty; so should you in Common Sense: And giving up, in sober Mind, your Cause, Submit to Silence, or renounce the Laws

I R E L A N D.

Cork, Aug. 12. Yesterday ended our Assizes; James Long was convicted and executed for the Murder of his Wife near Bandon, as formerly mentioned. 'Tis remarkable, that nobody else was convicted at this Assizes, a Circumstance not known these many Years before.

Athy, Aug. 11. Yesterday Henry Nowland and one Macmanus, received Sentence to be executed at Naas, on Monday se'ennight; the former for House-breaking, and the latter a notorious Horse-stealer.

Maryborough, Aug. 15. This Day the Assizes ended here for the Queen's County, when two Men received Sentence of Death, and are to be executed the 25th Inst. viz. Morgan Fane for Burglary and Felony, and Richard Cavanagh for Cow-stealing: Patrick Cahan, formerly Turnkey of the Gaol, to be transported, for taking Money to let a Man under Sentence of Death make his Escape; Roger Moore to be transported as a Vagabond, if he can't give Security; one Man was burnt in the Hand, and another to be whipt.

On the 5th Inst. departed this Life, in the 49th Year of her Age, at Lamberton in the Queen's County, the Right Hon. the Countess of Cavan: Never was Woman more universally lamented, but in a particular Manner by all those who had the Happiness of her Acquaintance; to the Poor she was compassionate and charitable; as a Wife, her Example was almost imitable; to her Children, she was affectionate, tender, and loving; to her Friends zealous, faithful and just: Never did Woman more truly discharge her Duty both to God and Man. On the 7th she was interred in the Parish Church of Maryborough; to which Place her Corpse was attended by a vast Concourse of People, not only most of the principal Families in the Country, and the poorer Sort, but many Strangers; all desirous of paying their last Services to so good and valuable a Woman, but few were without heavy Hearts and weeping Eyes. Her Ladyship was Niece to the late famous Sir Richard Steele; and has left Issue by the present Earl of Cavan, one Son and two Daughters.

Colerain, Aug. 16. On Friday last the News having arrived here of her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales being safely delivered of a Princess, the two Companies of Colonel O'way's Regiment now quarter'd here, were drawn up in the Parade, and fired several Volleys; the Night concluded with Bonfires, Illuminations, and other Demonstrations of Joy.

Dublin, Aug. 20. We hear from Castle-Blayney, that on the Arrival there of the News of the safe Delivery of her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, the Earl of Ro'common, and the Lord Blayney, with several Gentlemen, of Distinction, met at the Tavern, and spent the Evening in drinking the Health of the young Princess, a speedy up-rising to the Princess of Wales, their Majesties, the Prince of Wales, and all the Royal Family, and several other loyal Healths. The Whole was concluded with Bonfires, firing of Patterars, and other Demonstrations of Joy, the People having plenty of Liquor given them to make merry with on the happy Occasion.

On Monday Night last Mr. Robert Hoope, an eminent Merchant, a large Dealer, and a Man of Fortune, died at his House in Linen-hall-street, and on Thursday Evening was decently interred at the Quakers burial Place near St. Stephen's Green; his Loss is much regretted by his Friends, and those who had the Happiness of his Acquaintance, being a young Gentleman of good Character, fair dealing, and amiable in his Conversation.

William Connolly, Esq; and his Lady, Colonel Wansborough, Governor of the Royal Hospital near Dublin, and Brigadier General Cope, arrived here from England.

On Wednesday one Mr. French, who was Agent for the Right Hon. the Lord Chief Justice Rogerfon, went with some other Company into the House of one Chambers on Lazor's-Hill, seemingly in good Health, and after taking a Dram of Brandy, sat down and died immediately.

Yesterday ten Criminals were transported for the Plantations.

There have been of late so many great Frays and Quarrels in this City, that the Guards have been doubled; and the Gentlemen of the Army are so harrassed in quelling them, that they have scarce Rest Day or Night: On Tuesday Night there was the greatest Battling and Fighting in Patrick-street and Plunket-street that could be; the Guards came and carried them off, naked in their Buffs as they were fighting, and lodged them in that Manner in New-gate. The like happened on Wednesday Night in Newmarket, when the Butchers were glad to carry off their Meat any way from the Stalls; and the People in Pill-Lane were obliged to shut up their Shops and Houses; as were also those in Smithfield, they having the like Roting in those Places. And for discovering and apprehending the Rioters, and for the more effectual suppressing Riots in the City and County of Dublin, the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor hath been pleased to publish a Proclamation.

Last Night the Hon. Colonel Thomas Bligh, Member of Parliament for the Borough of Athboy, in the County of Meath, was married to Miss Bury, an agreeable young Lady, with a handsome Fortune.
